Lesson Abstract:

This lesson introduces students to the concept of empire and what societies needed to become empires. Students begin the lesson by reviewing human development and civilization at the end of Era 2 and then activate their knowledge about the concept of empire. In introducing the idea of city-states, students make conjectures about the spread of empires in Era 3 by analyzing a series of historical maps. Using an “Argument Formation Note Tracker,” students begin to take notes during the unit to prepare for an argumentative writing assignment. Students then generate an initial list of requirements for empire, discuss the concept of militarism, and then tie these ideas together as they analyze a feedback loop for empire development. The lessons ends with an exit pass where students summarize their conclusions about what it takes to form an empire.
